REMARKS

25X1X

1. On 15 August 1950, a resident of Aken (M 52/D 96) said that near the end of the war an improvised airfield was constructed south of Aken, east of the road to Koethon (M 52/D 95). According to [REDACTED] the field was in the heath, along the road between kilometer stones 3.1 and 4.1 and was about 1,000 meters square. The field was not serviceable because it was very uneven and partially under cultivation. There were no hangars or buildings. *

- * Comment. During World War II an improvised airfield was located near Ken, but according to information of February 1950 the field no longer existed.

CONFIDENTIAL in accordance with the letter of 16 October 1978 from the Director of Central Intelligence to the Archivist of the United States.
